1. Pack Location

2. Pack Information

2014 min number of wolves: Confirmation of this pack has been challenging over the past year. Reports vary from two wolves observed traveling together in Naneum area to four sets of tracks seen last winter.

Number of radioed individuals and type of collar: None.

Summer trapping plans: WDFW may attempt to trap and collar a member of the pack if an area can be found that is highly used by wolves.

General denning area known (yes/no): No.

3. Wolf-Livestock Conflict

Pack's conflict history: No depredations or greater-than-normal losses of livestock have been reported.

Knowledge of allotments/producers/grazing practices in area: Most large producers have current Damage Prevention Agreements, while some smaller producers who do not graze DNR or USFS allotments do not. Some medium-sized producers and hobby farms have entered into agreements, but most have not.

Outreach with producers (leading up to turnout; plans for check ins throughout summer):

- WDFW communicates with producers with Damage Prevention Agreements when new or potential wolf sightings occur in their area.
- Producers with agreements are asked about turnout dates and locations.
- Producers with agreements have daily or weekly check in with range riders and Conflict Specialist.

Number of Damage Prevention Cooperative Agreements with livestock producers: Pack territory undefined; an agreement exists with a producer from the Teanaway Pack Territory which affects data sharing in the Wenatchee Pack area.

Plans for verbal communication of wolf locations to area producers: Communicate as appropriate, verified wolf sightings. No collared wolves in Wenatchee Pack.

Number of data sharing agreements with producers/counties: 1 with a domestic sheep grazing operator.

Approaches for sanitation: Follow agreement guidelines.

Range rider/human presence: Currently there are 2 active part-time range riders in this territory, one focused on cattle and one focused on sheep.

Outreach to producers on WDFW lands:

- WDFW communicates with producers with Damage Prevention Agreements when new or potential wolf sightings occur in their area.
- Producers with agreements are asked about turnout dates and locations.
- Producers with agreements have daily or weekly check in with range riders and Conflict Specialist.
