WASHINGTON COASTAL DUNGENESS CRAB INDUSTRY NOTICE
Correcting the date, the pot limit south of Klipsan is lifted.

The purpose of this notice is to provide you with final details relative to the opening of the 2021-22 coastal Dungeness crab fishery north of Klipsan Beach. We are also announcing the delay of the planned implementation of the mandatory use of electronic fish receiving tickets until further notice.

WDFW and Quinault managers reviewed catch data from the first 31 days of the Quinault fishery yesterday. Per the terms of our co-management agreement, Quinault fishers will get a 47-day head start in the area from Point Chehalis north to Destruction Island, which results in a state season opening in the area north of Klipsan Beach on January 11, 2022.

WDFW's co-management agreement with the Quileute Tribe, uses different criteria to open the state fishery between the Queets River and Destruction Island and for the area north of Destruction Island. The agreement uses a sliding scale approach based on Quileute catch in the entire Quileute U&A for the area between Queets and Destruction Island. Given the low early season catch for Quileute, this area will open on January 11, 2022, concurrent with the opening north of Klipsan Beach.

With regard to the opening north of Destruction Island, WDFW's co-management agreement with Quileute includes a provision to ensure that there are 20 fishable days for Quileute fishers between December 1 and January 15th, prior to opening the state fishery north of Destruction Island. We will release additional information on the opening of this area at a later time.

In summary, the entire area from Klipsan Beach to Destruction Island (excluding Special Management Areas) will open to state fishers on January 11, 2022. See details below.

The decision to move mandatory use of the electronic fish receiving ticket system has been delayed to allow for final testing and refinement of the mobile application. Fish dealers who are currently using the web-based version of electronic fish tickets are encouraged to continue to do so (more information will be provided to licensed dealers and buyers).
