

Wolf Advisory Group - Membership Application

The Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife (WDFW) is seeking candidates to serve a two-year, renewable appointment on the Wolf Advisory Group (WAG), a citizen committee that advises WDFW on wolf conservation and management.

There are currently four vacancies on the WAG. Although anyone is welcome to apply, based on the current composition of WAG membership WDFW is especially interested in recruiting stakeholders who represent 1) hunting organizations/interests, 2) livestock production/organizations in the northeast region of the state, 3) other “at large” interests. Successful candidates must demonstrate the ability to work collaboratively with those whose views may significantly differ from their own and seek to constructively engage in developing guidance and recommendations to WDFW regarding Washington wolf conservation and management. If you are applying as the designated representative of an organization, please be sure to provide the name of the organization and a contact person who can confirm your application.

Please reach out to Tristan Marquez at wagfacilitationteam@rossstrategic.com with any questions about completing this application.

Thank you for your interest in serving on the WAG!
